Acknowledgements

The ILI wishes to express heartiest gratitude to the following people without whose invaluable contribution the development of the present book would not have been possible:

Ghassem Haghghat-talab, who meticulously supervised the team with ceaseless encouragement and extensive expertise.

Gholamreza Salahi, for his important role in preparing the related tasks for the dialogs and the reading passages,

Elham Ali-Tabari, for her tireless effort and devotion in selecting the listening materials and preparing the related tasks,

Pantea Savadkoohi, for her painstaking efforts in preparing the spoken drills, word boxes, and the glossary,

Manak Yavari, Amin Toopchipour, and Mahmood Bahasadri for their significant role in proofreading the book,

Saeed Azimi for his significant part in the publication of the book, and all those who contributed to the successful completion of the project.

Introduction

The ILI Basic Series, a three-level course, has primarily been designed to satisfy the needs of the ILI learners and is closely linked to the ILI teaching procedure. The units presented in the book, therefore, have been prepared with the above objective in mind.

Unit Organization

In this series, the books contain 10 units, each consisting of a variety of sections. The different sections of each unit are meant to meet the various objectives of the course. A typical unit in Basic levels consists of two parts, A & B, except unit ten which includes only a word box, a dialog, a listening and a grammar box. Each unit includes the following:

Word Box

There are two word boxes, A & B, in each unit of the book. To make sure that learners understand the meaning of the new words and their role in a sentence, the new lexical items appear on a list at the beginning of each part under the title of Word Box A or B. Illustrations have also been included to further clarify the meaning of some of the words. It is to be noted that not all the new words have been listed here.

Conversation

Conversation sections which appear only in Part A of each unit include: Getting Ready, Dialog and Talking More.

Getting Ready which is meant to function as a warm-up, gives the learners a general idea about the subject of the dialog through triggering a brief discussion about it.

Dialog usually aims to present a grammar point and a language function in real life situations. Care has been taken to select topics of high interest to both male and female learners.

Talking More encourages class participation and has the learners use their speaking skill to make up similar conversations using the dialog as a framework.

Listening

There are two listening sections in each unit of the book. The different activities in each listening section are: Warming Up, Listening Tasks A&B, and Your Turn to Talk.

Warming Up is designed to function as a lead-in to the listening material and
