Preface

Introduction

After publishing "News & Views: A Course in Reading British & American News" in 2010, I received some constructive positive feedback from both my colleagues and students regarding the video-based activities of the book. This provided me with further impetus to work on the present book to satisfy the needs and interest of readers, and this was how "Learn English News through Videos" came into existence.

Objectives

The book is overridingly intended to offer an authentic multi-skills syllabus in listening, reading and writing of news items that is specifically geared towards the needs of the students of EFL, as well as of media and cultural studies. To this end, 100 thematically-based lessons have been designed to encourage readers to work with dictionary while reading a piece of news text, practice their intensive and extensive listening skills, and write summaries for the news items they see.

Key Features

Taking the objectives into account, the book has been developed s that a set of specific features are included. Here are some of the key features of the book:

- 100 easy-to-use lessons containing 400 video clips in to. 1
- Four video-based exercises in each two-page lessor with wairst exercise representing the theme of the lesson on the left-hand page and three fillow-exercises on the right-hand page
- A-Z thematic classification of news items w 144 different subjects such as accidents, archaeology, attack, cars, clashes, conflict, crime culture, demonstration, diplomacy, economy, education, elections, energy, environment fir ace, etc.
- Hands-on multimedia-based exercises up, orter by the accompanied DVD
- Coverage of more than 1500 frequently used new words and expressions
- · Suitable for self-study and English labe atory use
- · BrE and AmE phonetic transcri, tions of new words
- Comprehensive reader-frien : a swer key
- Alphabetical index of nev. "on is and expressions

The Organisation on the Lessons

The general structure of unlessons is as the following:

- 1. Exercise 1 is a and of warm-up which elicits the context-based meaning of important words and expression, used in the first video clip. The pronunciation and part of speech of the words are also provided.
- 2. Fill-in-the-blank exercise whose main purpose is to improve intensive listening and to draw readers' attention towards certain words and expressions.
- Guided summarisation intends to enable the readers to write the summary of a piece of news through having access to potentially difficult words and expressions.
- 4. Summarisation exercise which functions mainly as a wrap-up for each lesson. This exercise aims at improving readers' extensive listening and requires them to draw on their global understanding of a video clip to derive and provide an oral/written summary of the news item.

Other Symbols Used in the Pronunciations

- /(r)/ This shows that the /r/ as in the word teacher / t i:.tʃə(r)/ is pronounced in UK English when followed by a vowel sound, but not when followed by a consonant sound. In US English it is always pronounced.
- /// primary stress (the part of the word you emphasize most), as in above /ə'bʌv/
- /₁/ secondary stress (the part of the word you emphasize as well as, but not quite as much as, the primary stress), as in backyard /₁bæk'jɑ:d/
- /l/ This is used when a consonant (usually 'l') can be pronounced as a syllable on its own, as in the word angle /'æŋ.gl/.
- This separates British and American pronunciations: British on the left and the American on the right.
- This is the syllable mark shown as a full stop, coming before each new syllable as in the word standard /'stæn.dəd/. The syllable mark shows that the word 'standard' has two syllables. If stress marks are shown in a word, they also show when a new syllable starts. So, in a word like banana /bə'nɑ:.nə/ the stress mark and syllable mark show that there are three syllables in the word.
